

Green Hub Twente Waste Segregation Animation

Freelance motion design work for the Green Hub at the University of Twente

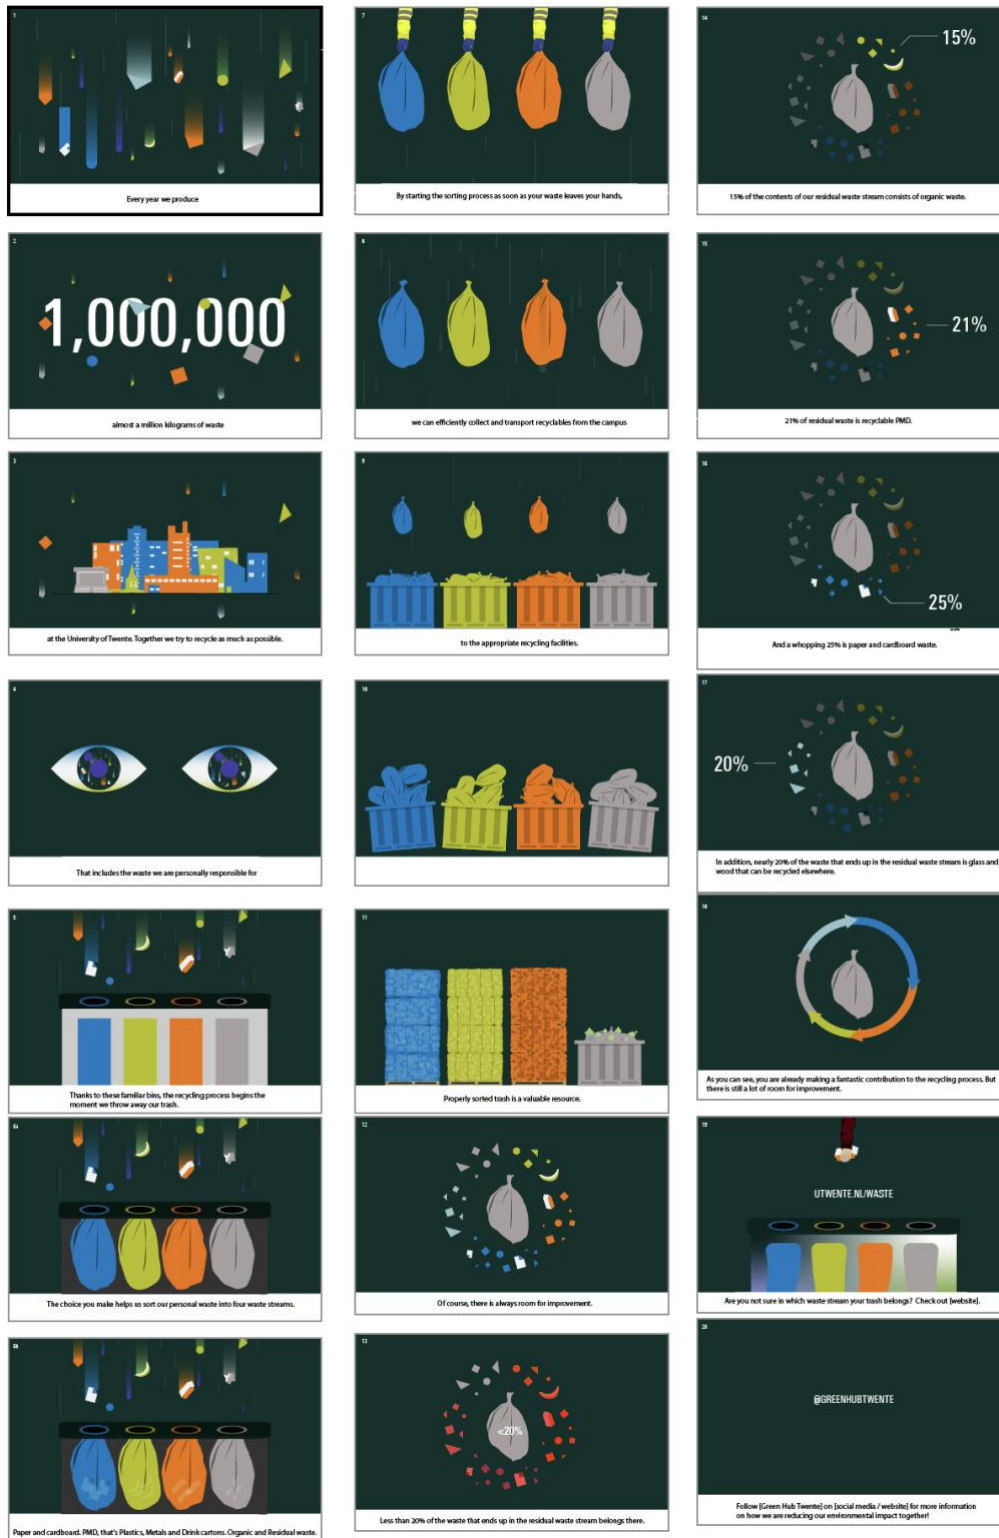

Problem

At the University of Twente, a significant portion of the material thrown into residual waste bins is actually recyclable and belongs in other waste streams. To address this issue, I was asked to create an animation that raises awareness among students and shows them how to properly separate their waste by explaining the problem, the proposed solution, and its impact.

Delivery and impact

The video was used on various social media platforms and played on screens at the university to raise awareness and inform students on properly separated trash.
